ENGINEERS TO SIT IN JUDGMENT ON PROPOSED PLANTS

Plan Is To Erect "Little TVA" Along Upper Delaware River Valley

PROTESTS EXPECTED

Hearing Called Today for District at Request of Congress

PHILADELPHIA, July 12—(INS)—U. S. Army engineers today will sit in judgment on a proposal to erect a "little TVA" along the Delaware River's upper valley by the construction of hydro-electric power plants between Easton and the Delaware Water Gap.

Delegations from private power companies, United Mine Workers of America, and coal communities in the entire Lehigh Valley are expected to appear to protest against the plan as the engineers meet in special session in the U. S. Customs House here.

The hearing has been called by engineers for the district at the request of Congress and will be devoted to determining whether the proposal is feasible. Construction would include the erection of dams at Chestnut Hill, immediately north of Easton; Belvidere, N. J.; and Tock's Island. The dams also would be used for flood control and navigation purposes.

Opposition of coal communities and the miners' union to the plan is based on claims that development of hydro-electric power along the Delaware would be a death blow to Pennsylvania's anthracite industry.

So far no money has been appropriated for the work nor any start on the project made, it was explained at the army engineers' headquarters. "Our last report was made on a request in 1932, but nothing was ever done about the matter," one engineer said. "Who caused it to be brought up again we do not know, but we are going to see whether it is worthwhile."

Girl To Again Take The Stand In Own Defense

DOVER, Del., July 12—(INS)—Eighteen-year-old Isabella Donovan today was to resume her place on the witness stand to testify that her CCC camp sweetheart shot himself as they sat in a parked automobile in Milford's "lovers' lane" on March 15.

On trial for manslaughter, the plump, but not unattractive brunette has repudiated a "confession" that she shot the youth, Vaughn Webb, 19, in a struggle for the gun Vaughn had borrowed from a CCC camp barracks mate.

Attired in a neat, white sports dress, the girl calmly faced a jury of 12 men who are trying her on a manslaughter charge. Time and again, she said, Vaughn had threatened to take his life because of jealousy over her.

Once the youth attempted to jump from a window because another "boy friend" had followed her upstairs, Isabella said. Another time he drove to a lonely road, closed the car windows and tried to kill both himself and her by turning carbon monoxide gas into the automobile from the motor, "but I persuaded him not to," she added.

PUERTO RICO DEPICTED VITAL MILITARY BASE

Much Aviation Activity Will Be Concentrated On Island by 1941

A STRATEGIC OUTPOST

SAN JUAN, P. R., July 12—(INS)—More aviation activity will be concentrated on the small island of Puerto Rico by 1941 than any place of its size under the American flag.

Famous for more than four centuries as a strategic outpost the U. S. Territory of Puerto Rico today is being converted into an aviation center that will affect vitally South America, the mainland of the United States and Central America.

Puerto Rico is destined to become the No. 1 air base in the Atlantic for the Army and Navy. Aviation experts predict, too, that Puerto Rico will be vastly important in future commercial air travel to Europe because, as the most southeasterly U. S. possession, the island is nearer Europe and South America than any point in the United States.

A great armada of airplanes is being readied to protect the Panama Canal and vital mainland and South American points against invasion, using Puerto Rico as a base of operations.

The most modern in airports will be established in at least two points in Puerto Rico which will be models of the latest developments of warfare. In addition to hangars, barracks, and other army and navy necessities, the airports will be model villages complete with theatres, shops and recreational facilities, all in the Spanish Colonial style of architecture.

Nickel Out; Nickel In

(By "The Stroller")
She had her nickel refunded. We are speaking of a young woman who lives in one of Bristol's suburbs.

It so happened that just as she entered the waters of a nearby stream for a swim a few days ago that a storm began to brew. Back across the stream she hurriedly swam, sped across the intervening lot midst swirl of dust borne by the wind and on to the bath-house.

Hurriedly turning in her bathing check and receiving her check-garments so she might get home before the storm broke, she lost no time in putting out her palm when the proprietor of the bath-house offered to refund the lone nickel she had paid.

The score to date is a 100-yard swim for nothing.

BRISTOL FAMILY KEPT BUSY BUILDING BOATS

Activity Traced To Desire of Boys to Construct Own Craft

STARTED 4 YEARS AGO

The revival of boat building in Bristol by the Cherubini family of Penn street can be traced to the desire on the part of the lads in the family for a boat of their own.

It was about four summers ago that the sons of Leon Cherubini, 348 Penn street, asked their Dad to build them a boat, and having a natural bent toward such things through his work as a cabinet maker, the father readily acquiesced. But he found he had plenty of aid, for all of the older boys had a hand at the job.

After completing the boat, it was soon sold, so another was started, and another, and so on, for the Cherubinis, father and four older sons, found that orders for the various sizes and types of craft rolled in readily.

Today they are putting finishing touches on a 19-foot sailboat, which boasts a 30-foot mast made of a hollowed spruce trunk. It will carry 225 square feet of sail. This trim boat, with its trim of mahogany, is looked upon enviously each week by a number of individuals who would like to own it. And while this one is being finished the Cherubinis are building a 13-foot sail boat, with a mast 22 feet high. This is a "Duster Moth", with excellent lines.

Leon, Jr., aged 20 years; John, 18, Richard, 15, and Joseph, 14, are their father's aides in the task of boat-building. The youngest Cherubini youth, Thomas, 10, hasn't yet taken a decided interest in the work, but may some day follow in the footsteps of other members of the family.

It is the spare time of the five that is put into the business of boat building. Mr. Cherubini put together a band saw, and this has proved a great aid in cutting the various pieces. There were fashioned a number of 12-foot row-boats, then a 17-foot fishing boat with a motor; a seven-foot speed boat; the 19-foot sail-boat, and now the 13-foot sailing craft.

In addition to his employment, and his jobs in his own work-shop here, Mr. Cherubini is helping to build a 50-foot yacht in Doylestown.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT
"Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc."

Linked Together

Washington, July 11. SOME time ago, it was reported by persons usually well informed on such matters that the personal relationship between the President and Mr. John L. Lewis of the C. I. O. had reached a stage of distinct unfriendliness, not to say hearty dislike.

Mr. Lewis, who is of a truculent disposition, is said to resent the patronizing way in which Mr. Roosevelt talks to him, and Mr. Roosevelt has a strong distaste for the violent outbursts of Mr. Lewis on various subjects.

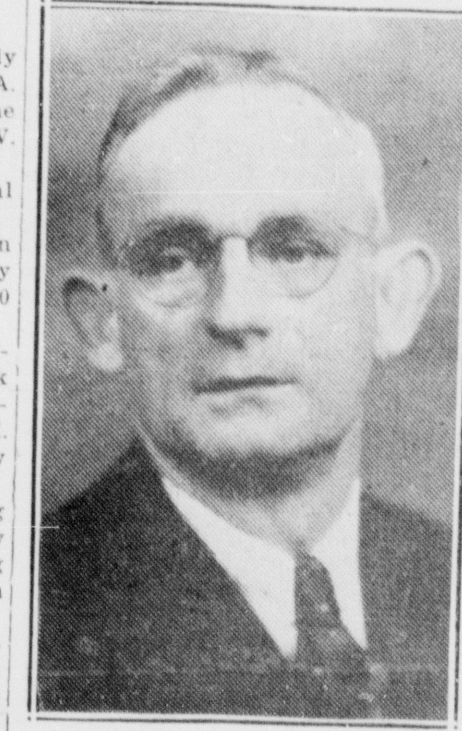

THE further point is made that the President thinks Mr. Lewis deliberately sabotaged his efforts to bring about peace between the labor factions, while Mr. Lewis considers that the President should openly instead of covertly have espoused his cause in the recent coal strike, though without Mr. Roosevelt's support he could not have won. Fundamentally, the political philosophies of the two men are very different. Mr. Lewis is, naturally, for the spending policy because it plays the labor game, and he is for the Administration method of distributing relief because they lighten the union burden in sustaining strikes. But to the more extreme economic theories of the New Deal he has never subscribed.

NOR does he feel the least reverence for the intellectual attainments of the so-called "inner circle." In brief, Mr. Lewis is a labor leader but not a "Liberal" as the word is interpreted by the men upon whom Mr. Roosevelt so strongly leans. At least, that is

SEEKS NOMINATION

For Recorder of Deeds FRANK PFEIFER

Frank Pfeifer, 54, an outstanding business man in his home district, Bristol Borough, has announced his candidacy for nomination on the Republican ticket for the office of Recorder of Deeds of Bucks County.

Coming before the voters of Bucks county for the first time, Mr. Pfeifer, with 22 years business experience in Bristol and throughout Bucks county, is prominently identified and favorably known. He is affiliated with a number of fraternal organizations and service clubs.

Mr. Pfeifer has been a member of Bristol Borough Council since 1929, and his record in that office and his personal popularity combine to make him a candidate favored by a majority of the voters for any office within their power to bestow.

Although Mr. Pfeifer is at all times eager to be of service to others, that kindly characteristic is most outstanding in the part he has taken in activities to aid crippled and underprivileged children. Mr. Pfeifer prides himself for his regularity in his attendance to his duties of the public office he holds here as a Borough Councilman and takes a zealous interest in his duties as the chairman of two important committees of the Borough, street and highway, and municipal water supply committees.

Born in Philadelphia, February 2, 1885, Mr. Pfeifer was brought to Bristol by his parents when he was three years of age, and has lived here ever since. After attending the public schools of Bristol, he worked in several factories here, following which he entered the piano and musical instruments business with the late Charles Grim.

Upon the latter's death, some 20 years ago, Mr. Pfeifer took over the business which he has continued since. He is vice-president of the Bristol Rotary Club, director of the Penn Manor Club, of Morrisville; member of the Lehigh County Fish and Game Protective Association, chairman of the Crippled Children and Charity Committees of Bristol Lodge, No. 570, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks for the past 10 years.

Taking an active part in Republican politics Mr. Pfeifer was selected as committeeman from the sixth ward of Bristol Borough six years ago, and has served continuously in that capacity ever since.

Possibility of Avoiding War

Paris, July 12—War over Danzig may possibly be avoided on the basis of newly formulated terms, details of which International News Service learned today.

For the first time since Chancellor Hitler tore up the Polish-German non-aggression pact in his famous speech before the Reichstag on April 28, there appears to be a dim band of light on a horizon otherwise dark with universal anxiety, that this autumn might bring war.

This sent hope coming from two elements. The resolution to use force if necessary, and the desire to conciliate if possible.

Both these elements now have been so heavily emphasized by Poland, France and Great Britain that optimism is expressed that perhaps even German Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop is convinced, although the last report had it that he is still advising Hitler that Britain is bluffing.

The danger is ever present that any willingness of the "people's front" to talk will be misinterpreted by Hitler as weakness. Nevertheless, I. N. S. learned that Poland is willing to take a chance. Although the Poles satisfactorily give every sign of willingness—even sometimes eagerness—to fight if necessary, they also now express willingness to make far-reaching compromises to keep peace.

I understand that a quiet approach is now being, or will be made soon to Hitler to try to induce him to force negotiations instead of war.

Again turning South we passed close by the shores of Lake Lindeman, where a few fishermen were seen pulling in their catches, on through some excellent game country of British Columbia on a high plateau which the railway traverses, and back to White Pass. There flying high in the wind were the Stars and Stripes and the Union Jack on opposite sides of the imaginary boundary line, while close at their bases were piles of snow. From this point Summit Lake sends its waters to join others to form the great Yukon which finally enters the Bering Sea. Waters from the other side eventually reach the Pacific Ocean.

Back to the crossing of Dead Horse Gulch on a steel cantilever bridge, 215 feet high (the most northerly bridge of its kind and height in the world), we saw the old trail very well defined. A short distance beyond, while halting at Inspiration Point, altitude of 2400 feet, we had opportunity to read the inscription on the monument erected to the faithful pack horses that gave their lives in the valley below to further the interests and sometimes save the lives of their masters. The inscription reads: "The Dead are speaking. In memory of us 3,000 pack animals that laid our bones on these awful hills during the Gold Rush of 1897-1898. We now thank those listening souls that heard our groans across the stretch of years. We waited but not in vain." Placed by the Ladies of the Golden North and the Alaska Yukon Pioneers.

Iced Tea
As You'll Like It

By Katharine Fisher

Director, Good Housekeeping Institute

On sweltering days when family or guests are con to the thought of topping off a meal with a hot beverage, they'll warm right up to the idea of tea poured over sparkling ice cubes and served in tall glasses. For, all punning aside, full-flavored iced tea is one of the special treats of the good old summertime. After repeated tests at the Institute, we have found there are three methods of making iced tea which please most tastes, and here they are:

KATHARINE FISHER
Director of Good Housekeeping
Institute

The Cold Water Method

This method has the merit of eliminating the clouding which occurs when tea is made hot and then chilled. It produces a beverage that is always crystal clear. When using this method the measured quantity of tea is simply placed in cold water in a covered pitcher or other suitable container, and left to stand in the refrigerator for anywhere from twelve to twenty-four hours before straining, icing and serving. We found that using 3 level tsp. of tea to each ½ c. of cold water made a brew preferred by most members of our tasting jury.

The strength, of course, can be varied to suit your family's tea taste, by using more or less tea by the level half teaspoon. In other words, if you want a stronger tea, use 3½ tsp. to ½ c. water. If a weaker brew is wanted, use 2½ tsp. to ½ c. water. As for the amount of tea used in this method, our laboratory analysis showed it to be no more stimulating than tea made by hot-water methods in which a smaller quantity is used.

Old Standby Method

Our second method is more or less an old standby. Of all the strengths made, our tasters preferred a brew made with 1½ tsp. tea to each ½ c. boiling water, brewed for 5 minutes before straining. Cool the resulting tea for 3 hours without refrigeration before icing and serving.

Our tasting jury, after comparing this iced tea with the iced tea prepared by the Cold-Water Method, detected little difference in the quality of the tea flavor. We believe that this old Standby Method is a convenient one, if you wish to prepare hot tea at breakfast or luncheon and then let it cool, ready for serving at the next meal. Some clouding, though, is apt to occur when the tea is iced.

The Jiffy Method

Iced tea at a moment's notice can be made by pouring a strong hot tea over ice. Because there is a greater dilution when hot tea is poured over ice, we found that we had to make the hot tea stronger than in the Old Standby Method. In our tests the following proportions were favored: Allow 2 tsp. tea to each ½ c. boiling water and brew for 5 min.; strain over ice. Of course, strength can be varied by adding more or less tea by the level half teaspoonful.

Fattening their batting averages, the Odd Fellows team jumped back into third place in the Bristol Twilight League, swamping the Grundy's team, 11-4, last evening on the Grundy field.

Sixteen safe knocks sang out from the bats of the Oddies. Four of these were credited to Punkie Zeffries while Ike Watson and Harry Berry had a trio apiece. Cooper and McCue were the only Odd Fellows players not to get at least one single.

Dave Ennis held the Grundyites to five hits in twirling for the Oddies. He fanned eight. Chart Tomlinson was Ennis' nemesis as he smashed out a double in the second and followed with a home run in the fourth. The losers played poor ball all night.

GALLAGHER HURLS HALL TO VERY CLOSE VICTORY

Checking a Rohm & Haas rally in the last frame, "Reds" Gallagher hurled the Hall Aluminum aggregation to a close 5-4 victory over the chemical workers last evening on the Maple Beach field. It was the fourth straight win for the Hall team.

Going into the last half of the seventh, the airplane workers had a 5-2 edge. Cerevello batted and hit to Stromp who errored. Brunner flied out. Dougherty worked Gallagher for a pass. Dick counted both runners with a double. Things became darker when Gallagher gave a walk to Rockhill but Oppman hit to Bill Dougherty who touched third, forcing Dick. Jeffries struck out to end the inning.

Gallagher held the losers to six hits and whiffed eight batters. He escaped in several tight pinches and did some very fine pitching in the first two frames when he struck out five batters.

Paul Cerevello held the Hall batters to seven hits but they were timely and this coupled with several passes coming at the wrong time defeated the Maple Beach moundman. Leon Forman and Bill Dougherty led the winners with the stick while Vic Rockhill did the best hitting for the losers.

The loss put the Rohm and Haas team a game and one-half away from first place and enabled the Hall team to creep close to fourth and third place.

5TH WARD OPPOSITION OF NO AVAIL IN TILT

The tail-end Fleetwings team gave the Fifth Ward Sporting Club plenty of opposition in their softball tilt last evening but not quite enough to win as the Warders continued their hold on first place, beating the airplane workers, 7-5.

The Fleetwings group took an early lead and kept it until the fifth when the Fifth Ward rallied and scored three times to take the lead. But the Fleetwingers came back strong in the sixth to deadlock the count.

The Sporting Club came through in the final frame to win the tilt. Peterpaul opened with a four triple and scored on an error by Tosti. To make victory certain, Galzerano drove the ball into deep center for a home run.

Galzerano and Quindio divided the pitching honors for the winners, with the latter receiving credit for the triumph. Eddie Tosti pitched for the losers.

Ray Mellor's double in the last inning scored the tying run for Harriman A. C., yesterday morning, when they played Dorrance Street nine, and he likewise scored the winning run. Effective pitching of Walter Wilson, and the "heads-up" play of the Harriman team gave them the victory, 3-2, at Leedom's field.

Husband, Wife Die in Fire

Atlantic City, N. J., July 12—Arthur Packer, 65, and his wife Lola, proprietors of a laundry, were burned to death today when a $30,000 fire swept their business establishment and living quarters.

The bodies of the couple were found in their second-floor apartment, directly over the laundry, after firemen brought the blaze under control.

The flames apparently broke out in the boiler room of the 2½-story building, firemen said.

and other heavy bombers which the U. S. Army will maintain in Puerto Rico a level stretch of ground, lying between great mountains and blue tropical seas, has been selected. The army field is to be located at Punta Borinquen on the west coast of Puerto Rico overlooking Mona Passage, famed in pirate lore.

The site selected by the army is a 1,500-acre, triangular piece of land Here 250 flying officers and 2,220 enlisted men will be stationed. More than 100 huge bombers will be stationed at Punta Borinquen in peace times—many more in emergencies. It is estimated that this airport will cost more than $10,000,000.

Navy activities in Puerto Rico will be centered around Isla Grande where a $9,300,000 airport is being erected as a base for the Navy's big flying patrol boats. Here too a model village is being erected to take care of 650 enlisted men and several hundred officers and their families.

Spotted throughout Puerto Rico are more than 15 emergency air fields which will be used by the army and navy as well as commercial ships thus making landings possible almost anywhere in this island which is only 100 miles long and 40 miles wide.

Puerto Rico today is a great center for commercial aviation being only one day's flight from New York and near important ports in Central and South America and the West Indies.

Each served 25 years, and they have reached the age of 65 years.

Mr. Shive is contemplating a trip to his boyhood home in Missouri. Mr. Benner has no definite plans for the future.

Rearrangement of the local staff advances Ralph Moser to the clerkship to take Shive's place, and Raymond Musselman from substitute carrier to substitute clerk.

Carl Schanely, former temporary substitute carrier, has been made regular substitute carrier to succeed Benner, with permanent appointment to follow.

Ramo Ricci has been named temporary substitute carrier and parcel post delivery.

Civil service examinations have been scheduled for July, about the 20th, for the position of substitute clerk-carrier.

Sixty-four have filed applications to take this examination.

A four-way overhead adjustable traffic light has been installed at the Trenton avenue-North Pennsylvania intersection, Morrisville, and is now in running order.

The light will run for 45 seconds for traffic east and west on Trenton avenue and for 15 seconds for traffic running north and south on Pennsylvania avenue. The timing will be checked by Morrisville police and, if it is suitable, will remain so. However, if more time is needed for traffic on Pennsylvania avenue then the time will be increased for that street.

the view of those closest to Mr. Lewis—and certainly there is no secret about the feeling between the more conspicuous of the White House group and some of Mr. Lewis' personal aides. The latter—and Mr. Lewis, too—consistently proclaim themselves "Liberals" in their publicity and public statements. They apply the word to themselves in order to call the employing class reactionaries. But there are Liberals and Liberals in the Administration and the White House advisers do not disguise their belief that Mr. Lewis is not their kind. As for Mr. Lewis, he cheerfully concedes it—even asserts it.

ALL this, however, does not alter the fact that the interests of the Administration and the interests of the C. I. O. are so linked that they are compelled to work together. The record of Congress at the present session is the best proof of this. On practically every issue the forces of Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Lewis fight together. For example, in the big battle over the relief appropriation, the C. I. O. propaganda machine, directed by Mr. Lewis, went into action in support of the President, denouncing members of Congress who voted to cut the appropriation below the White House figure.

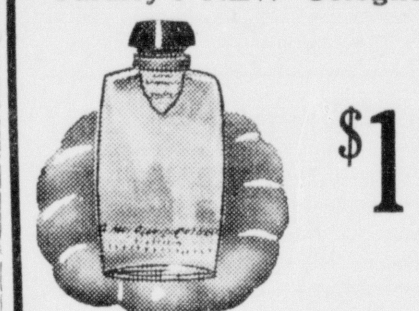

ON the other hand, it is the President who has made it possible for Mr. Lewis to block the efforts of the A. F. of L. and the employers to amend the Wagner Labor Act—and this in spite of the fact that the President has privately conceded that certain amendments ought to be made. But not so Mr. Lewis. He does not want the act touched. And, supported by the White House, the chances seem very good the session will end without it being touched.

White House support for Mr. Lewis in his fight to stall off amendments has not been given openly, but it has been none the less effective. At the start of the session the state of public sentiment, the demands of the press and the weight of the A. F. of L. plus the employers, seemed to insure changes that would remove the cause for feeling that the National Labor Relations Board is dominated by the C. I. O. and that, regardless of the merits of their case, employers are unable to get justice under it.

HAD it been possible to have a vote any time in the first four months of this session, the amendments urged by Senators Burke and Walsh would easily have been adopted. But the C. I. O.-Administration forces have prevented a vote. First, action was delayed by the excuse that it was not worth while to take the amendments into committee until the A. F. of L.-C. I. O. peace negotiations were concluded. By the time these were abandoned, public interest in the amendments had evaporated and the session had reached a stage where it is now forecast no action before the adjournment is at all likely. This is exactly as Mr. Lewis planned it, but it could not have worked out that way but for Roosevelt support of his delay strategy. When these things are considered, it seems unimportant whether the personal relations of Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Lewis are unfriendly or not. They can dislike each other personally as intensely as they please. It is their political not their personal relations that count.

"THERE'S ALWAYS TOMORROW" by May Christie

CHAPTER XIII

The audition was over. It had been a success.

Madame Berthe's assistant had brought a make-up box along. "Now we turn a pretty girl into a beauty," she had said at Toni as she worked magic with her face.

There were three exquisite period costumes in the Du Barry style. Three snowy wigs that were the crowning touch in giving Toni an ethereal, startling beauty.

The first gown was slipped over her head. Billowy blue satin skirts over peach taffeta, streaming with silver lace. An uncomfortably tight, but beautiful and becoming bodice, with square, deep décolletage outlined with rosebuds, in the best tradition of the court of Versailles.

The club was being decorated. The workmen paused when Toni appeared. The accompanist struck rippling chords on the piano. Toni went into an old French chanson.

Then the second gown. The second wig. Another song.

Then came the third, most difficult test.

For this final costume was unwieldy. And even more so was its accompanying headpiece.

For set on the wig, in amusing fashion, was a miniature farmyard, no less! A tiny duck pond fashioned from a bit of mirror, tiny toy ducks, cows, a donkey, sheep, a little barn, and a dairymaid.

Thus weighted, Niklas commanded her to sweep elegantly from the balcony down on a winding flight of stairs that led to the main floor. There must be no teetering, no stumbling. "You are the chate-laine, receiving your guests!"

Over and over, this last test was made.

"Thank heaven," thought Toni, "for old mam's little back home who used to make me walk the nursery with a book on my head!"

"And this time you will please sing as you descend," called Niklas from the orchestra dais.

Three men, presumably associates of his, had entered the club. With Lou Steiner, and the workmen, they formed an intent audience. With the last note of her song, as she reached the middle of the dance floor, Toni swept low in a curtsy. They applauded heartily.

But not Niklas.

He beckoned her. And the old fear of being back on Broadway, jobless, came over her.

"You will do," the promoter told her curtly, "but bear in mind, Miss Goddard, that you are still in the amateur class. You must practice."

"Indeed I shall. All day long," Her heart rose.

"We shall open the club within two weeks," he told her. "Meantime you will take a two-hour singing lesson daily. I have already engaged an instructor, provisionally."

"Yes. Thank you."

Would he pay for the lessons? she wondered. Or would they be deducted from her salary? Probably the latter.

"You will move immediately from your hotel to a quiet inn at Riverdale-on-the-Hudson, where I shall engage and pay for a room for you."

Her eyes widened in suspicion. By accepting this, would she not be obligated to him? Suppose he came to visit her?

In the ensuing pause, the expression on Niklas's face remained unchanged, and yet she knew that he had read her thought.

"Between now and the opening, I shall see you only at rehearsals at the club, at such times as I send my car for you."

The accompanist struck rippling chords on the piano. Toni went into an old French chanson.

be willing to revise the contract, Miss Goddard. But you know it works two ways. That's only fair. A month in the club will show your drawing capacity. If it is unsatisfactory, we will have to let you go. That's understood."

With a nervous flutter of her hands, she said: "I will make good. I'll practice hard. I won't fail."

His face relaxed. His manner became suave again. "I'm sure of it, Miss Goddard, otherwise I should not have made negotiations with you. I am not a man who wastes his time."

She signed the contract.

"You will remain very quiet until our opening. Except for going to your singing lessons, you will not be seen around Broadway. The publicity must start immediately, you understand"—Niklas turned from her to Lou—"this web of mystery you spoke of, this build-up—"

The two men moved off, and conferred together.

When they came back to her, Niklas said:

"And I come in daily for my singing lessons?"

"That will be in order," said Niklas, "since Monsieur Alphonse's studio is away from Broadway."

"I suggest we wear a veil going and coming from her lessons," said the press agent. "Lots of theatrical people go to Alphonse. They mustn't see her. It might defeat my campaign."

"Not necessarily. She's a singer, isn't she? Why not?"

"Better get that hair dyed blond to-day, Miss Goddard—Mademoiselle Antoinette, rather. That's the name under which you will register at the Riverdale Hotel. The 'marquise' will come later."

The press agent winked knowingly. "Nicky, once the show's opened, and everybody's talking, it might be advisable to move her to somewhere swankier. Get me?"

"When the time comes," said Niklas meaningly, "all that will be attended to."
